

The Gaming Stadium announces creation of Strategic Advisory Board

VANCOUVER, British Columbia, June 11 2020 - The Gaming Stadium is proud to announce the formation of a new strategic advisory board with its first two members, Jenny Mann and John Walters.

The purpose of the board will be to provide strategic advice and insights into current and future opportunities for The Gaming Stadium (TGS). The Advisors will also actively promote and make introductions on behalf of the Company through their overall networks of business contacts

“The creation of this board is exciting for our whole team. As we plan to take our company to the next level it is important to have the guidance and expertise of those who not only understand the esports industry, but also provide different perspectives,” said Spiro Khouri, TGS CEO “Jenny and John are both accomplished veterans in their respective industries and will be a big part in building TGS today and in the future. Speaking of future growth we have a desire to go global. With John residing in Ontario and Jenny residing in Australia it gives our company a footprint in other strategic markets.”

Jenny Mann has a two-decade proven track record in planning and delivery of Olympic Games and global sport events, and more recently in managing gaming and esports initiatives. Jenny was the Head of Sport Partnerships at the International Olympic Committee, and has specialist skills in strategic relationship development, and player and athlete representation. Her extensive experience includes producing innovative event campaigns and executing complex projects with results-oriented teams.

John Walters, NHLPA Certified Agent, played hockey at the AAA and Junior Level before becoming a coach to some of the top prospects in Ontario. Walters spent five years at PEAC School for Elite Athletes as Director of Hockey where he oversaw hockey development and programming. During his tenure at PEAC, NHL drafted players including Josh Ho-Sang, Connor McDavid, Mitchell Stephens, Malcolm Subban and Jordan Subban all attended. Walters currently works with Pulver Sports and The Will Sports Group advising players at all levels – from minor hockey to the NHL. He has worked very closely with Tyler Seguin from early in his playing career through to the present, helping Seguin to develop into one of the top players in the NHL.
